The Chronicle of Eusebius of Caesarea ends with an account of the events of the twentieth year of the reign of Emperor Constantine I the Great (325 AD). Jerome the Blessed, the famous Christian theologian and writer, creator of the canonical Latin text of the Bible, continued the work of his predecessor up to the famous Battle of Adrianople (378 AD). In this work the author offers his translation of the additions made by Jerome. The translation is based on the edition: Eusebius Werke Bd 7. Tl 1. Die Chronik des Hieronymus: Hieronymi Chronicon / Hrsg. von R. Helm. Leipzig, 1913.
